Charles Henry Meltzer, in whose play, "The First Duchess of Marlborough," Mrs. Le Moyne will be seen at English's Opera House to-night, is now the New York correspondent of the London Chronicle and the He traveled in Europe and Asia for several years as a correspondent for the New York Herald, finally settling in New York to devote his energy to the stage. His bitterness toward the conventional dry rot and sensational untruth worked against him, for he was one opposed to many, but the signs are now that he will receive the measure of success to which his ability and determination entitle him. No play in which he has had a hand has been seen in this city except "More Than Queen," in which Julia Arthur acted, and that was hardly more than a beautiful spectacle. He adapted "The Sunken Bell" for E. H. Sothern's use. Mrs. Le Moyne's two previous appearances in this city were made ast season, first in "The Greatest Thing in the World," and second with Otis Skinner and Eleanor Robson in "In a Balcony."

The roundness and smoothness of Hal Stephens's act at the Grand Opera House this week, in which he imitates well-known Stephens enters the stage in evening dress, and says he has attended a vaudeville ensurprising, he says, if he should dream of actors. He sits in a chair before his fireplace and falls asleep. The stage is dark-ened, and several pictures of Weber and Fields are thrown by a stereopticon on a white space above the fireplace. This gives or time to prepare for his first imitation. In a few moments the lights come up and reveal Mr. Stephens as one of the well-known team of German comedians. with his hand on an effigy of the other. Using an excellent ventriloquial trick, he reproduces some of the Weber-Field choppy dialogue. In turn he appears as Johnny Ray, Willis Sweatnam, one of the Russel brothers and Joseph Jefferson. His duplicates are exact in face and costume, even to Sweatnam's black make-up. The scenery for the mountain top incident in "Rip Van Winkle" is beautiful. Thus by hard work and good taste Mr. Stephens is rising to the top in vaudeville.

The Liebler Company, under whose manfell on it fiercely. Mr. Zangwill had given some offense by his independent personal attitude, and no doubt he is not without his peculiarities, and this, it seemed, lessened friendship for him in critical circles. The play was called no play at all and was accounted a failure. The Liebler Company was said to have lost $30,000 in the venture. Notwithstanding, the managers, without cheapening the company, sent the play on tour, and it was reported afterward that | ter, Susan Mayhew, and Mr. John H. Plum. hey had recovered what they lost. Persons that saw the play here have remembered it with great pleasure as an artistic picture of the life Mr. Zangwill knows so well. It was acted finely. Few modern plays are held in the memory of the public a season after they have passed away. It was also this company that presented Mrs. Le Moyne, Otis Skinner and Eleanor Robson in Browning's "In a Balcony" last season, and with it Yeats's symbolistic drama, 'The Land of Heart's Desire," a composition as far removed as might be from what are called popular plays.

THE PROBLEM.

OROTHY in the nursery can calculate the price of Ivory Soap per cake, but it would take a mathematical genius to calculate its true value. For he must take account of time, labor, and materials. He must deduct from the apparent cost the saving in the longer life of the cake, in the longer life of the washed fabric, in the labor required, in the time consumed, in the strength expended, in the results obtained. When all is finished, Ivory is the cheapest soap in the world. It floats.
